The crowd included many Conservation of setting apart Rev. G. W. Walkup as tives. He denounced the custom-house ring and the civil-rights bill, and advocated a policy of pacification and generosity. He pronounced the Kellogg government of Louisiana a fraud and outrage, and showed that the Republicans of Congress so regarded it. His views on finance were that it would have done no harm to try the experiment of moderate inflation to afford relief to the South. He also spoke adversely to the centennial appropriation and denounced the scheme. The speech made a good impression, and the negroes pare the statistical report and forward it to paid close attention. Porter's references to Platt and Stowell were very rich and racy. ROBIN ADAIR.
